Covers BetSmart Rating

For over 25 years, Covers.

com has been providing our readers with in-depth sportsbook ratings.

In the process, we've developed the Covers BetSmart Rating to ensure that every visitor from South Korea has confidence that they are wagering at a safe and trusted betting site.

The five core factors that go into a bookmaker's overall rating are bonuses and promotions, banking and payout speeds, key features, security and trust, and customer support.

The Covers review team also considers many other factors when evaluating each book.

It's important to us that you get the most up-to-date and informative reviews so that you can select the sportsbook that best suits your needs.

We learn about the best ways to collect bonuses, withdraw winnings, and get any necessary help from the support team.

Now Amazon wants its customers to think twice before sending products back. The e-commerce giant has quietly implemented a new policy, charging customers a $1 fee if they return items to a UPS store instead of a Whole Foods, Amazon Fresh, or Kohl's closer to their address, according to a report in The Information.

Amazon is also warning consumers about "frequently returned" items sold on their site. They recently introduced a badge that tells shoppers to check the product details and customer reviews on items with higher return rates in their product category.

Amazon cutting costs

The new return fee is the latest in a series of cost-cutting measures implemented by Amazon. Last month, the company announced it would be laying off 9,000 workers, following an earlier round of layoffs last year that saw pink slips handed out to more than 18,000 employees.

While Amazon's return fees are surprising, they're not unprecedented. Other retail chains have recently done away with their free online return policy, including Abercrombie & Fitch (which charges $7), American Eagle, Foot Locker, Urban Outfitters, and Zara.

If there is any good news to come out of these new return policies, it's the
