However, while legalization is slow to come and not rapidly widespread, there are a number of legitimate, legally licensed offshore online sportsbook options for 18-year olds.

Betting opportunities for Americans who are 18 and older have potentially expanded to include state-regulated sportsbooks due to the repeal of PASPA.

Offshore sportsbooks are a legally viable alternative for Americans who are eighteen years old living in states that only allow 21 and over sports gambling, or none at all.

While the US Federal Wire Act prohibits interstate online sports betting, the US gambling law has no bearing on domestic online sportsbooks or access to licensed offshore sportsbooks.

Nearly all of them! There is only one state that prohibits online betting, regardless of the source.

In the United States, the minimum age requirement for sports betting varies by state with the standard between 18 or 21.

However, online sportsbooks have no reason to worry about this issue since all betting is placed through an online portal and can offer sports gambling to bettors as young as 18.
