When we study data and numbers for a footballer, we can find out his strengths or weaknesses and work on them accordingly.

Data analytics is really just a fancy term for that and there are several ways it can

For example, how many hurdles each one successfully clears per race, or how each horse that will give you an edge over the average bettor.

It may take some time and lots of playing around with large sets of data, but the reward will be worth it.

Once you've developed an accurate predictive model, finding a positive value to bet on is as simple as comparing two numbers.

Using regression analysis, we comb through large data sets to find variables that seemed to correlate to wins or losses in past contests and predict future results based on those numbers.
