If you ask anyone around this sub of whether you can turn sports betting into a full time job, 90% of the answers are going to be no.

So then you ask people why do you still do this, and some say to have fun, while others say they do it as a hobby and you might get responses of "once I reach $____, I withdraw out and start over again."

With that in mind, it has been known by many that the only way to break even and even make a little of profit we would need to bankroll manage and bet a % of our bankroll in the form of units.

Now if you have $1000 and you are betting %1 of that, one would see why it would take forever to make decent profit and end up making it a full time.

Now here is my suggestion, theoretically speaking what sort of bankroll would one need to make betting full time? I was thinking a bankroll of a $100,000 at %1 each bet making it a $1000 per bet would surely be enough to sustain that or are we talking less or more?

I understand downswings are going to come, but with that in mind, would a $100,000 be sufficient, assuming you actually could get a hold of a $100,000????

That's my shower thought for the day, THANK YOU!

Sobald das Spiel mit einem neuen, frisch gemischten Deck im Kartenschuh startet, beginnen wir beim Wert 0 und zählen; jede einzelne Karte, die aufgedeckt wurde, deren Wert +1 oder -1 dazu.

Denn dann sind immer noch so viele Karten übrig, dass die Varianz noch zu groß ist, um es gewinnbringend auszunutzen.

Allerdings sind diese Systeme noch komplexer und dementsprechend noch schwieriger zu meistern.

An den verschiedenen Zähltypen sieht man schon, wie schwer man mit dem Zählen noch Gewinne machen kann.

Dazu zählt man die Karten mit hohen und niedrigen Werten.
