This question already has answers here: Why did my friend lose all his money? (4) Tj T* BT /

My friend has this plan where he implies that it's impossible to lose, as long as the odds of winning are 50/50 on each bet.

His idea is that basically you keep doubling your bet until you win and then start over again.

So for example, you bet 1 dollar and you lose, your net profit is now -1 dollar.

Now you double your bet to 4 dollars and you win.

Now you start again.

Oh and I've pointed out that he uses gamblers fallacy in very obscure way, and as he insists you need to go back to betting 1 dollar once you've won.

I found this on the internet but could not find anything.

To apply, you must submit a complete Program application through the TikTok app itself. TikTok will evaluate your application and eligibility, and will notify you of your acceptance or rejection. If your application is rejected, you can reapply after 30 days of the delivery of the rejection notice.

According to TikTok, the payout is calculated based on a combination of factors.

These include the number of views and the authenticity of those views, the level of engagement with the content, as well as ensuring the videos adhere to the Community Guidelines and Terms of Service.

Although TikTok has not officially announced how much it pays its creators for their views, it is estimated that TikTok pays around 2 to 4 cents per 1,000 views on a video. That means TikTok will pay you a minimum of $2 for 100K views and $10 for 500K views.
