Second brother testifies Jussie Smollett paid for staged attack

Smollett&#39;s lawyer worked to discredit the brothers&#39; accounts, suggesting they attacked Smollett because they didn&#39;t like him, and tried to get him t o pay them each $1 million not to testify that he staged the assault.

Olabingo Osundairo&#39;s testimony at Smollett&#39;s trial in Chicago Thursday e choed the account his brother, Abimbola Osundairo, gave on the witness stand a d ay earlier, including that Smollett wanted the brothers to douse him with gasoli ne and put a noose around his neck, and that Smollett gave them a $100 bill to b uy the supplies and paid them with a $3,500 check.

Osundairo also addressed the defense contention that the brothers were driven by homophobia. He testified that he has nothing against gays and the jury was show n a photo of the siblings taking part in Chicago&#39;s 2015 gay pride parade dre ssed as trojan warriors.

Smollett, 39, is charged with six counts of felony disorderly conduct for making what prosecutors say was a false police report about the alleged attack on Jan.

29, 2019 - one count for each time he gave a report - to three different office rs. The class 4 felony carries a prison sentence of up to three years, but exper ts have said if Smollett is convicted he likely would be placed on probation and ordered to perform community service.

Olabingo Osundairo told jurors he talked to police without a promise of immunity or under any sort of favorable deal. He added: &quot;It was simply just to get the truth out of what happened that night.&quot;

Smollett&#39;s legal team needs to cast doubt on the brothers&#39; damaging test imony but it isn&#39;t easy. Abimbola Osundairo stuck with his story during cros s-examination, while also denying he had a sexual relationship with Smollett or that he asked the actor to hire him. And much of what the Osundairros have told j urors about that night appears to be corroborated by video and other evidence.

The defense said the brothers lied about Smollett staging the attack to get out
