Whether you've won a lot or a little, there are lots of ways you can put your money to good use.

If you fritter away thousands of pounds on things which don't really matter, you won't be left with anything to show for your good fortune and success. If you already have a house, you may want to invest in a buy to let property instead.

Low Risk Investments

Investments with a medium risk are always a good option, but you need to take care if you're inexperienced.

Although high risk investments aren't for everyone, you may find that it's worth the risk of investing in an asset which is a little more risky.

Perhaps you've always wanted your own business but never wanted to take out a bank loan? You could fund it with your winnings.

Or perhaps you would like to invest in a startup that has taken your interest in the hope that it'll become a huge success in the future? Only you can judge whether it's worth your while to invest your hard-won money in this way, but if you choose to do this, make sure that you don't put all your financial eggs into this one risky basket.

A pack of 50 reusable and odor-free reusable baggies so you can go to work in the morning and eat your lunch, rather than throwing in the towel and heading out to the store.

I like that the bag can be folded up and used again later.

I like that they have a leak-proof cap, so I can use it in the bathroom or the car.

I'm very happy with this purchase.

Plus, the silicone head means you'll get less waste because you'll be able to take the brush out easily and without the brush head slipping off the toothbrush.

It is easy to use.

They'll be so much easier to clean than straws that you'll actually feel the need to clean.
