One of the easiest ways to find out if a review is real or fake is when the sellers add reviews from other sellers who sell a similar product. By clicking on similar products and checking the review, you can easily decipher the fake reviews from the real ones.

Also when a review expresses a certain problem with the product and other reviews also express the same and the positive review says the opposite the chances are that the positive review is fake as well.

3 Filtering Average Reviews

I have purchased the product, it has always come close to the reviews with two or three stars unless the product is that good that it deserves the five star. So next time come across a product you are interested in, try and see the reviews that have 3 ratings at the minimum and so you can get a picture of the product quality and how does it work, and what is the customer's personal experience so you are not disappointed with what the seller would provide you after purchase.

This is done by the seller to increase the chance of purchases of a new product.

The only way to decide the difference when you see a five-star review is to wait for a while till NLC reviews the product and see how many reviews thereafter come with a 5 Star to really come to understand whether the product is worth 5 stars or another way is your personal judgment which with enough time I am sure you will figure out the difference between the fake review.

Google then will find the website featuring your image as well as the related image so the return result should take you to the product page on Aliexpress so you know the review and product image is genuine. In this method you know if the image is shown is being used by someone else and is being reposted as a fake review. Google images also detect the subject of your photo and bring up the other related sites to the image topic so you know if the seller is genuine or not as well by doing this.

Five Star Rating without text or images cannot be trusted

You can check the real review numbers of the seller by going to the seller's feedback page, which will give you a clear summary of the seller on all the positive feedback that he's had for the past six months and for how long he has been a seller within Aliexpress to give you the confidence of knowing that you are dealing with a genuine seller.
